

Introduction to Architecture

Inspired by "Iggy Peck: Architect" By Andrea Beaty

Ms. Haines' class first read the story "Iggy Peck Architect," which inspired them to design buildings of their own! Each student had 5 minutes to generate an A-Z list of various buildings that they could think of. Students came up with over 40 different kinds of buildings-everything from a castle to a dormitory! Once students shared their brainstorm lists, students circled buildings that they'd be interested in designing a plan for. They placed themselves into groups of 2-3 and started drafting a blue print for their building. Once the blue print was finished, they worked together to build a model of their building.
