MATTERS

An Orlando chapter called Ekal Vidyalaya is an organization that is not about just providing funds so that impoverished children in India can get an education, it goes beyond that. It takes roughly 5 years to get a “village” ready for an Ekal teacher to come and start classes. For the most part they are lucky if they have a 1 room building to have as a school, most of the time it’s just under a tree. The villages are so remote; roads etc. are very difficult to provide access for the teacher. But Ekal goes beyond just providing a teacher. They help the farmers and the community learns new life skills in many different ways.

For the Rao family, they have been extremely moved by the good humanitarian efforts of Ekal, that when they went to India last summer, they felt it was very important for their children to visit an Ekal village school for perspective. They had an amazing/ life altering experience.

Usually Ekal will have a musical group that travels to the US for about 6 months visiting the major cities and raising money. That is the easy part on the US side. During the event in Orlando we usually raise around $100,000 which is sponsoring about 300 schools. Each school is sponsored by a contributing a $1 a day, for an entire village, that’s $365.00 for the whole year.

This year the Rao Family exceed that goal and started a Youth program here in Orlando. Some children other than their own already attend OSS; these kids are amazing about getting out in the community and making Ekal Vidyalaya known. The Rao children had the privilege of speaking in front of an event audience of over 800 people. They were awesome! Part of what the youth group does is making their presence known throughout the year in different formats. Various cultural activities and then we now added an essay contest (see flyer on the next page) and this new workshop called Appathon.

The pilot programs for the Appathon in Boston charged $60 per person as a donation to Ekal and that included lunch. We have control and discretion on how we arrange this here. The workshop basically is run by a group of high schoolers and a few computer minded adults. It really is a fun filled day. In the morning the kids get to brainstorm on what kind of app they feel is needed and the community needs, and the rest of the day they are not only shown how to build an App, but actually build the app to a working status.

Below is the link of information on the Appathon, but as it’s a new program so information is currently limited.
